CHAPTER I'S NEWSLETTER SEPTEMBER 2015 BOB AND BECKY'S PAGE

How's it going--good??? We had a great time at Chapter B's fun run, Randy and Linda Porter and their chapter really out did themselves with the ride and scavenger hunt. Being in the day light worked out real good. It was fun to go back to the restaurant and have supper and do the games. We also had a good ride up to Chapter I 2's corn roast, in Southington, Ohio. Cherryhair, Shorty and Jean, Becky and I, and met Jon and Shari along the way. Good timing on that part. They had a good turnout for the corn roast and lots of good corn. They also had a lot of auction items I believe some of our chapter members were able to benefit from. Afterwards, Jon and Shari led the way down to Waco for some good ice cream. Had never been there before, will have to do it again sometime. Understand that it was good eating from the group that went to the Brown Derby. Sorry we couldn't make it, but had other functions to attend (that happen every fifty years). The 16th, we had Chapter B's hospital toy ride. They had a real good turn out, a beautiful day, and a well put on parade of bikes to the hospital. That same day, a group of chapter members and friends and family of Dave Martin rode down to the Killbuck Bottom to scatter his ashes. It made for a nice afternoon/evening ride, for Dave's last ride. Anybody interested in doing the logo for the Buckeye Rally 2016, the theme is Hobo Junction and we will need a logo to hand in by Nov. 14. We are still wondering if anyone is interested in being director of Chapter I. Becky and I would like to step down this year.

RON'S RIDER EDUCATION PAGE

You should NOT ride at your skill level
(Always have an 'escape path')

By: James R. Davis

Huh? A fundamental concept for newbies as well as experienced riders is that you should ALWAYS have an escape path while riding a motorcycle. I can think of nobody who would argue with that bit of wisdom. Yet there are far too many injuries and deaths that result from failing to understand that very concept.

It is a little bit like being advice that is too obvious to be taken seriously. Advice like "Look where you want to go" or "If you look at that pothole you are approaching, you will hit it" involves UNDERSTANDING the essence of target fixation before they have attention getting meaning to the listener.

Similarly, advice like "Ride your own ride" requires that you UNDERSTAND that some riders have better skills than you do at a particular task so that if you follow the herd there WILL be times (tasks) that you will confront that are beyond

RIDE EDUCATOR

Ron Harford

330-276-276

rlharford@embarqmail.com

your abilities. Unless you have a background, and temperament, that allows you to see a 'bigger picture', the advice is trivial and easily ignored - meaning that it has no value for you.

So let's get back to the theme of this message.

You have practiced and developed a certain skill level at all the common tasks required of you while riding. You can, for example, confidently and smoothly handle a given curve in the road at, say, 55 MPH without dragging a peg or losing traction. My advice to you is that you should NOT ride that curve at 55 MPH. Simple advice but you seem unwilling to accept it, yet.

You need that experience (background) and temperament going for you before you can UNDERSTAND it and allow yourself to be persuaded to accept the advice as meaningful.

When you ride your motorcycle you are OFTEN confronted with the unexpected. Riding would be boring if it were not for those moments. You have come to believe that you can handle virtually anything in the way of 'unexpected' because you have, so far, successfully managed to do so. Your reflexes are quick, your judgement is sound, you tend not to panic, and both you and your motorcycle are 'healthy'. But sooner or later an 'unexpected' will occur that is slightly (or grossly) beyond your abilities to deal with. Then what?

We will go back to that skill you demonstrably have: the ability to handle a particular curve at 55 MPH. At 60 MPH you will have dragged a peg or lost traction. YOUR skill level at that particular task is 55 MPH. So what do you do if it turns out that for one reason or another you find yourself moving at 60 MPH in that curve, or that what looked like a 55 MPH curve to you turns out to be ever so slightly tighter than you thought? What happens, of course, is that you find yourself forced outside of your skill range.

And now you find yourself dragging a peg. Catastrophe? Not at all, so long as you can change the lean angle of your BIKE. You could, for example, simply lean your body (not the bike) deeper into that curve and the result of that behavior is that your bike's lean angle will diminish and your peg will no longer be dragging. A pucker moment that safely passes because you HAD SOMETHING IN RESERVE - an ESCAPE PATH (or RECOVERY TECHNIQUE).

We are almost there, dear reader.

So far we have discussed skill levels as if they were limits - beyond which you CANNOT safely continue. And I want you now to consider that if you ride AT your skill levels you are always at a threshold of loss of control. Such behavior is simply not the way to maximize your odds of escaping your experience without injury or death - because there WILL BE an 'unexpected' event in your future that pushes you beyond your limits.

Again, let's go back to that curve. We know that if we drag a peg we can almost always recover by simply leaning our bodies into the turn. So, from a skill level point of view, why not make it a practice of ALWAYS leaning our bodies into our turns? In that way we have increased our skill level (say, for example, to 60 MPH on that particular curve). But what we have simultaneously done is removed the escape path - the recovery technique - from our tool bag. And now when that 'unexpected' occurs, we have nowhere to go but DOWN!

It makes far more sense to NOT ride AT your skill level and to always keep a little bit of reserve. Call that 'defensive riding', 'having an escape path', 'having a recovery technique in your tool bag', or 'maintaining a reserve' - I don't care at all, but if you ride AT your limits you can call it 'eating the pavement'.

[It should be clear that stunters and racers often ride at their skill limits. I do not write safety articles for them. Instead, I write these articles for people who do not want to EVER experience an injury or death because of riding their motorcycles.]

SUNSHINE LADY

Greetings to all our Goldwing Friends -- with the cooler weather coming, remember we'll still have Indian Summer coming so don't put all the summer clothes away. The month of August was a very busy month for everyone. We maybe didn't have as strong of a head count at some of our activities but we did have many attend in someway and that's what it's all about to keep the spirit moving. Our last outing was the tribute to the Martin family for which Dave had requested. With Goldwing members and friends of Dave's family, there were 13 bikes and 2 cars

We have many things coming up, with dinner ride Aug 30 to Scio -- Sept. 3-6 Wing Ding at Hunsville AL -- 12th Chapter gathering (fair afterwards) -- 13th open ride -- 17th Killbuck Pizza -- 18th-19th Buckeye Time Out -- 26th Cleveland Zoo -- 27th Chapter V Teddy Bear Ride.....what a fun active month. Be sure to keep in mind to be looking around the house for those items for the auction following the Road Kill Stew supper.

On the lighter side we've very pleased to see Rob out on the bike (of course he had Sue riding with him). We're praying that Toot and Willie Edwards have behaved themselves this past month, but sure glad their keeping on the go. Well wishes and prayers are going out to those who haven't attended recently.
